The National WWII Museum Tour
The National WWII Museum tells the story of the American experience in the war that changed the world – why it was fought, how it was won, and what it means today – so that all generations will understand the price of freedom and be inspired by what they learn. The National WWII Museum opened the doors of their newest pavilion Campaign of Courage: European and Pacific Theaters to the public December 13, 2014, with the opening of the exhibit Road to Berlin: European Theater Galleries. From faltering first battles in North Africa to the bloody struggle at Germany's doorstep, the immersive galleries in Road to Berlin recreate actual battle settings and villages – complete with crumbling walls, bomb-torn rooftops, icy pathways, and a chillingly realistic soundscape. The result is a richly layered, multimedia journey that recreates the citizen soldier's experience with striking immediacy and impact: Visitors walking in the shadow of Normandy's brutally dense hedgerows can imagine the challenges that followed D-Day; attending a mission briefing with the Bomber Boys brings visitors inside America's all important Air War strategy; seeing personal artifacts – cigarette boxes, photographs – scattered over real Normandy sand offers a touching perspective on the human cost of the war. Expansive in its scope, exhaustive in its detail, and captivating in its innovative design, Campaigns of Courage invites exploration and connection like never before, bringing the lessons of history to life for today's generations – and generations to come.

Prepare your imagination for takeoff as you walk the flight line of historic aircraft inside the huge Aircraft Pavilion. View cockpits of combat aircraft. You'll also see tanks, a Vietnam River Patrol Boat, and a plane like the one flown by the Tuskegee Airmen. Experience life the way it was over seven decades ago on one of America's most decorated Battleships. It is all there. All waiting to be discovered by you!
